

40+ Paintball Plans for Homemade Paintball Gear

Organized and brought to you for FREE by <http://www.Pain4Glory.com>

A Special Note From the Creator

For me my love for paintball started with a slingshot. Too young to buy any real marker, my empty pockets didn't get me far so I had to settle with what was available. I quickly got enveloped in the sport, but still too young to work I turned to other ways to get into the sport. Making my own paintball gear was one of my only options, and needless to say it became a side hobby with paintball.

This guide is dedicated to all the tinkerers, modders, do-it-yourselfers, and paintballers on a budget. I hope you find the links in this document helpful.

Want future updates of this guide? I will be packing more and more links to videos and articles on homemade paintball gear as I find and receive them, so don't miss out on the next update (August 31st 2009). Visit <http://www.pain4glory.com> and subscribe to the newsletter. You will be sent the revised and updated guide as soon as it is updated.

Now for the good stuff!

Below are links to articles and videos that walk through the assembly process. Considerable effort was put into compiling this list, and finding and screening for the best how-to content. If you know of a video or article that belongs in this list feel free to shoot me an email at Pain4Glory@Gmail.com with the link (I'll be sure to thank you in the credits of the next updated version).

“Paintball is a pain for glory kind of sport. You will never win if you just sit behind that bunker, and you will never make it big if you don't make big moves. So buck it up and realize that without some pain you will never get to where you want to be. Take on some pressure, play as the underdog and run your gear like you own it. Let your passion for the game and determination help get you there.”
